Tuesday was the coldest day we have had this season. It made us think of "hog killing" and Bangs Landrums famous recipe for sausage.

Gov. Hiram Johnson, in a statement issued recently, charges that petty politicians who pictured Hughes as a reactionary caused the Republican defeat in California.

Some of the owners of Posted land became very much excited this week when they heard hunters were on their farms. A horseback rider and runner were dispatched to the scene of action at once and if the guilty parties had been found--well watch and see what will be done with them.

LOSES FINE COW.

Mr. N. B. Cheatham had the misfortune to lose a valuable milk cow last Sunday from the effects of eating Paris green, left carelessly around his meat house. He tells us she was well worth one hundred dollars.

W. C. T. U.

"Woman and Citizenship", with Mrs. Currey as the leader, was ably discussed at the Union Saturday afternoon. The women are studying along that line so that when the privilege is granted they will be intelligent voters.

WILSON'S LEAD INCREASES.

As the count progresses in California, which is very slow and many counties yet to report, Wilson's lead increases by 200 votes. The count in Minnesota has also increased Hughes vote in that state. Indications are now that the Republicans will have a small majority in the House.

MORE MULE SALES.

Good mules are still selling well in this county and are in good demand. Some of the sales here this week were made by local farmers. Mr. Taylor House sold a nice pair to W. B. Burton for $420. Robert Fox sold three six year old mare mules to Bright and Fox, for $600, and James Royston a pair to same parties for $380. Bright and Fox also sold a dandy 3 year old team to Pence Brothers for $430.

DEMOCRACY AND TAMMANY

In 1912 William J. Bryan drove Tammany Hall out of the Baltimore convention, and without the support of New York State, nominated a candidate who was neither obligated nor subservient to its malign influence, says the Elizabethtown News.

In 1916 Woodrow Wilson has been re-elected president of the United States without the vote of New York state, and in face of the treachery of Tammany Hall.

They have been put out of the Democratic party like Christ drove the Money-changers from the Temple, and all honor to William J. Bryan and Woodrow Wilson who do not want a Presidential bargain made on Wall Street's terms.

TURPIN EXHONERATED.

Irvine Turpin, the colored chauffeur, while driving the car owned by W. B. Burton, was exonerated from blame by a coroner jury, for running over and killing McKee Irvine, a ten year old boy at Hedgeville last week. The testimony showed clearly that it was an unavoidable accident. Turpin was released.

W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.

The National W. C. T. U. Convention meets in Indianapolis Friday the 17th. In 1879 when Indianapolis was "Hostess State" of the National Convention, Frances E. Willard was elected President. The Christian people of all denominations are rejoicing over the spiritual and moral uplift the city will receive from this great gathering of Christian women.

WATCH OUT.

The way of the transgressor will be hard if they are found hunting on any of the farms which are posted. These public spirited men are determined to protect the pheasants and the few remaining quail in this section. The places and names of owners of posted land are found in this paper each week and there is no excuse for anyone not knowing.

KENTUCKY MAGAZINE.

The first issue of the Kentucky Magazine, the publication which is to present what is best in Kentucky made its appearance last week. The magazine, which bears the imprint of Lexington and Louisville, treats of the resources, institutions, material, moral and educational progress, the character and achievements of Kentucky men and women, and the great possibilities of the state's future development. The complimentary copy sent this office showed the magazine to be a work of art from every standpoint.

NIMRODS SCARCE.

Owing possibly to the fact that so many of the farms in Garrard county are posted, in order to preserve the pheasants that are being propagated so successfully, that only sixty hunters license have been issued by County Clerk Hamilton during the year.

More than twice this many were issued last year and about the same number the year before. Hunters are warned not to hunt on any of the farms posted, the names and owners of which can be seen in every issue of the Record.

O'HEARN.

Mrs. Thomas O'Hearn died at her home on the Lexington road at an early hour Tuesday morning.

Her death was very sudden, dying of rheumatism of the heart before a doctor could reach her. She was a lovely Christian woman and had reared a splendid family. Beside her husband she is survived by ten living children, four girls and six boys who have the tenderest sympathy of the community. Funeral services were held at the home this morning by Rev. H. Schulte, of Richmond, after which interment took place in the Lancaster cemetery.

GEESSE AND MORE GEESSE

One of the largest droves of geese seen in this section for several years, passed thru the public square last Tuesday morning, being driven from the farm of Walton Moss, where they had been fattened for the poultry dealers, Bailey and Moss. There were 1804 geese in the drove and it was a curiosity not often seen anywhere and of course attracted much attention.

They were sold to Richmond parties and were driven through the country, a distance of twenty-five miles, where they will be slaughtered for the eastern markets.

BEETS THAT BEAT THE BEATER.

Mrs. Will Palmer brought to this office five beets which weighed 47 lbs. Wonder who raised the largest potatoes and cabbage in the county.

DANVILLE TO REALLY HAVE A HOTEL.

The Danville Advocate states that the asbestos roof has just been put on the hotel and that plastering has commenced. It also states the third floor will be finished and ready for occupancy in about three weeks. What we are interested in is the first floor where one can get something to eat.

LOUD LUMBERING AND HEAVY CANNONADING.

Lancaster and Garrard county Democrats had a big celebration last Friday night that started about seven o'clock and continued until well up in the night. The public square was crowded with enthusiastic men, women and children. Roman candles and balloons played quite a part and the heavy firing of the anvils could be heard for ten miles. It was certainly a noisy bunch, especially the boys, numbering several hundred that marched through every street, with their Rah, Rah's that showed that they were well equipped with good cheer leaders.

JUDGE F. P. FRISBIE.

In our enthusiasm and elation over the re-election of President Wilson, we failed to mention in our last issue, the election of Judge F. P. Frisbie as Police Judge for the city of Lancaster, for the term ending December 31st 1917. Judge Frisbie was appointed by Governor Stanley last spring to succeed Judge Prather who had resigned. He is making a splendid record on the bench and is putting the screws to every violator of the law, the boot-legal in particular. The fact that he had no opposition either in the primary or the final election, is evidence conclusive of his popularity and his competency to fill this important judgeship.

QUARTERLY MEETING At The Methodist Church.

The first Quarterly Meeting for the Conference year will be held at the Lancaster Methodist Church, Saturday evening and Sunday, November 18th and 19th. Rev. C. H. Greer, the Presiding Elder, will preach Saturday evening at 7 o'clock and Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered Sunday morning. Everybody is invited to these services.

The Quarterly Conference will be held Sunday at 2 p. m. Every official member is urged to be present at this Quarterly Conference.

F. D. Palmer, Pastor.

ANNUAL GOOSE SUPPER FRIDAY NIGHT, NOVEMBER 24th.

The third-annual goose supper will be given by the "Circle Girls" of the city at the room over the Rex Theater, Friday night of next week. This delightful occasion is looked forward to with much interest, for beside the goose a splendid menu is always served and at the nominal price of only fifty cents a plate. Something over fifty plates have already been spoken for, but the ladies will be well prepared to serve 100 and are expecting that many at least. The menu is as follows:

Goose dressing gravy
Apple Sauce
Chicken Salad Potato chips
Pickles Cranberries Jelly
Celery
Scolloped Oysters

CHRISTMAS SHIP

United States Will Send Food And Clothing To The Starving Armenians

America's Christmas Ship to foreign lands, which this year will be the Navy collier and Caesar or a collier of the same type, is being relined by the Government for carrying food supplies to destitute Syrians and Armenians. It will leave New York December 1, carrying a capacity cargo of foodstuffs and new clothing for Beirut, Syria, from which port relief will be distributed by American Red Cross and Red Crescent agents, aided by United States consuls and missionaries.

As a necessary preliminary to the sending of the Christmas Ship arrangements are being made for collections in the churches of the entire country Thanksgiving Day, the receipts of which will be used in completing the cargo. The ship will carry 600,000 pounds of rice, 200,000 pounds of lima beans, 400,000 pounds of crushed wheat, 2,100,000 pounds of whole wheat, 500,000 pounds of sugar, 1,000 cases of condensed milk for children, 10,000 barrels of flour, 50,000 gallons of petroleum and 25,000 gallons of cotton seed oil.

WARNING FOR HUNTERS.

J. Quincy Ward, Executive Agent of the Kentucky Game and Fish Commission, has sent out posters with instructions to the hunters of the State. The hunting season will open November 15 and the instructions are intended to accomplish much in the preservation of the game of Kentucky. The poster, which warns against hunting without a license, contains the following "Don't's": Don't shoot without a license; don't buy or sell quail; don't hunt off your own land without a license; don't wait until November 15 to buy your hunter's license--do it now; don't kill more than twelve quail in one day; don't shoot squirrels after December 15; don't shoot, buy or sell any rabbits before November 15; don't kill English or native pheasants, wild turkeys or woodcock; don't kill all the quail of a covey--leave some for seed; don't forget to feed the birds during the winter; don't fail to notify your local warden or this department of those who violate the law.

CENTRAL RECORD

THE FALL CLEANUP.

Too many farmers, progressive in most respects, who raise orchard fruits do not practice having a thorough and general cleaning up of the orchard before winter closes in. Brush piles, heaps of leaves, rubbish along the fence rows and unsalable fruit are allowed to remain in the orchard until spring before being burned or otherwise disposed of. Nearly all the insect pests that make trouble for the orchard owner take advantage of everything in the nature of rubbish in which to spend the winter. Time spent late in the fall clearing everything that will harbor insects is a profitable fight when the enemy is taken at a disadvantage.—Farm and Fireside.

WINTER STORAGE.

Fruits and Vegetables Should Be Stored For Home Consumption.

Be prepared to meet the high cost of living by storing fruits and vegetables now, is the advice of M. F. Ahearn, professor of landscape gardening in the Kansas State Agricultural college. "Do not pay winter prices for fruits and vegetables," said Professor Ahearn, "when by a simple reorganization of the cellar or some digging in the garden storage room can be provided for the preservation of large quantities of this class of food.

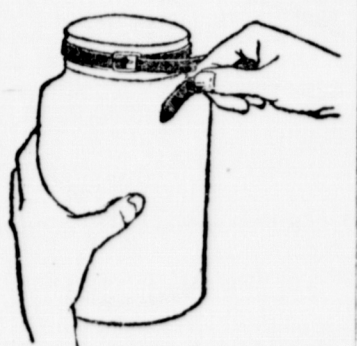

"If the fruit shrivels or becomes spongy and decays the fault in most cases can be traced to the storage room and may be corrected wholly or in part. The cellar must be well ventilated if fruit is to be kept successfully for any length of time. Temperature and humidity are factors quite as important as ventilation. The best temperature for fruit is 33 degrees or a little above.

"It is not well to allow much fluctuation in the temperature. In the farm cellar uniformity of temperature is maintained by means of ventilation, which should be watched closely. "Apples may be packed either in barrels or in boxes. The preference is usually given to the boxes. In the case of apples that are to be kept for a considerable time it is a good plan to wrap each one separately in a piece of paper."

Favorable conditions of moisture and temperature are obtained by burying the fruit in pits, points out Professor Ahearn. To prevent apples tasting of the earth they should be placed in boxes, barrels or other containers which keep them from direct contact with the soil, or the pit may be lined with boards.

Storage requirements for vegetables differ widely. The sweet potato and the squash are kept successfully only when the temperature is high and constant and the humidity is low. Root crops and cabbage can best be stored in pits. For storing cabbage in this manner the heads are pulled with the roots and leaves attached and placed upside down. Earth is placed on the pile until the plants, including the roots, are entirely covered.

The Strap as a Jar Opener. Unscrewing the tops of jars is a simple operation with the aid of a shawl or belt strap. The strap cannot slip, because the harder it is pulled the harder it grips the jar. If the main part of the jar can be held to with stand the pull of the strap the most obstinate cover will have to capitulate. Where the ordinary types of jar openers do not fit, the strap is an effective substitute.—Popular Science Monthly.

Improving Potato Seed. The Wisconsin experiment station, among others, has been giving special attention to potato seed improvement and of late years is showing that proper storage of seed stock is just as important as the improvement of seed. For several years the main effort was to standardize the leading commercial potato varieties grown in the state. The number of the most approved varieties has been reduced to six, some of which give best results under the different varying conditions of climate and soil in different sections of the state.

When holding the seed stock for supplying growers in the spring with improved seed it was found by the station experts that the seed lost much of its value through the effect of improper storage conditions. To make sure of good and safe storage a cellar was built in a well drained hillside. The walls and roof of this cellar are of concrete construction. Both walls and roof were then lined with lumber, which provided an air space of one and one-half inches. This cellar, with a storage capacity of 3,600 bushels, has now been in use for three years and has given excellent satisfaction.

Treat Virtue With Honor. The greatest offense against virtue is to speak ill against it.—Hazlitt.

Little Nutrition in Oysters. Stutzer maintains that it takes 14 oysters to contain as much nourishment as one egg, and 223 to equal a pound of beef, says the New York Medical Journal. And their cost is triple that of beef.

THE IMPLEMENT SHED.

From now on till next spring most of the implements of cultivation will not be used nor will be planters. The place for them and for all implements not in use every day is under the shed. Why? What does a man work for? Implements cost money. Exposure to the elements causes them to rust, warp and decay. When they are gone more work must be done to get more money to buy more implements, when just a little work and a little care at the right time would have made them last a year or two or three longer.

CONTROL OF GRAIN INSECTS.

Pennsylvania Experiment Station Furnishes Some Timely Advice.

C. H. Hadley, Jr., in charge of entomology extension at the Pennsylvania State college school of agriculture and experiment station, reports considerable injury to grain in the bin, especially to seed wheat, this fall. The best way to prevent such injury, according to Mr. Hadley, is to fumigate the bin with carbon bisulphide. This chemical may usually be purchased at drug stores.

The following directions for use are outlined: The bin should be made as nearly airtight as possible. About one pound of the sulphide is necessary for each 100 cubic feet of space. The liquid should be poured into one or more shallow dishes and placed on top of the grain. The bin should then be closed tightly and allowed to fumigate from twenty-four to thirty-six hours. The fumes will penetrate the grain, killing any insects present.

If the grain in the bin is quite deep it is a good plan to insert pieces of gas pipe, each with a stick inside, down into the grain at various points. The stick is then withdrawn and about one-fourth pint of the carbon bisulphide poured into the pipe.

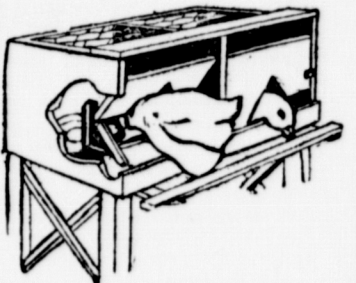

Carbon bisulphide is inflammable; hence it is absolutely necessary to keep lighted cigars, lanterns, etc., well away from the building in which fumigation is taking place. One should not inhale the fumes of the chemical, as they may cause sickness.

Provided fumigation is not continued longer than forty-eight hours the germinating quality of the grain will not be injured.

A Trap Nest.

This is an illustration of a trap nest, not a guillotine. It is designed to help the poultry breeder to find out his good layers and to keep pedigrees. It is very simple. It may be attached to the under side of the dropping board, with the front facing the pen and arranged so that it can be easily removed. The dropping board will then be the roof of the nest.

The rear of nest may be of wire for the sake of ventilation. If the nest is placed on the wall, slats or wire should be inserted from the front of the nest to the wall at a sharp angle to prevent the hen from roosting on the nest. When she enters the nest the hen's back raises the door, which releases the catch and allows the door to shut. The catch should be set so that its edge just holds the door, the position being regulated by a screw or nail at the lower inside edge of the catch. A washer on the screw will prevent it from sticking. The guard around the catch holds the nesting material away. The nest should be visited frequently to release the hens.—Popular Science Monthly.

More Live Stock Needed.

The population of the United States has increased by 24,000,000 people in the last fifteen years, and the number of beef animals has decreased 6,000,000 and sheep 10,000,000, while hogs have increased only 11,000,000.

BARN WISDOM.

"Barns For Wisconsin Dairy Farms" is the title of a new bulletin issued by the Wisconsin experiment station. The following comment applies most anywhere:

Gambrel roofs give more room for hay than do gable roofs. This is an important point to consider. The barn should have its length run north and south if the largest amount of direct sunlight is to be let inside. Rectangular shaped barns are more satisfactory than round ones.

The location should be at least 200 feet from the house and handy to a well, sheds and granaries. Drainage is necessary if the stock is to be kept healthy. Concrete is the best product than can be used for the foundation, ground floor and wall of the barn.

Build the barn large enough to meet future needs and to permit the handling of the maximum capacity of the farm. If the new barn just holds the stock at time of building another barn will probably be needed soon.

In One Way a Coward,
In Another Brave
By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

One night at 9 o'clock in the autumn of 1914 Edward Dewey, a wealthy banker and broker, arrived in a taxicab before his office, near the Stock Exchange, and, dismissing the chauffeur, entered the building. The janitor, who was near the door, saw him enter and go up the main stairway, the elevator not running.

A few persons, probably doing night work in the building, were coming and going till a late hour. The janitor saw Mr. Dewey's chief clerk, Clarence Hobson, leaving at about 10 o'clock.

At 11 o'clock George Benard passed the janitor and went upstairs. Benard was a protégé of Dewey's, and since Dewey had no children it was expected that Benard would be his heir. He was also engaged to Dewey's favorite niece, Alice Dewey. Ten minutes after 11 the janitor, who was at some distance from the entrance door of the building, saw a man pass out whom he believed to be Benard, but he was not sure, because he saw only his back, and at that time of night the light in the building was dim.

At midnight the janitor walked through the building and, seeing a light in Mr. Dewey's office, stopped and listened. After waiting some time and hearing no sound from within he opened the office door and entered a private hallway on which the office of John Dewey was situated. The light was in Mr. Dewey's office. The janitor knocked and, not receiving any reply, opened the door. There sat Dewey resting against his desk dead.

The police were called and found that he had been shot in the back. Before him on the desk was a set of books of the concern of which he had been the head.

There was no doubt as to the identity of the murderer, for George Benard was not seen again after the janitor had seen him, or a man supposed to be he, pass out of the building shortly after 11 o'clock.

Clarence Hobson was the only person connected with Edward Dewey's business capable of managing it, and he was appointed by the court to wind it up. This was the time when business on the stock exchange was suspended on account of the pan-European war. Hobson was fighting a failure on the part of the concern he represented, and it was generally supposed that he would pull it through, because Dewey had not been carrying stocks "on a margin," his customers being legitimate investors who bought and sold outright.

But one day, to the surprise of all, it was announced that the firm, which still did business under the name of Edward Dewey, had failed. Meanwhile it had leaked out that Hobson had been carrying a considerable load of stocks on his own account when the European war broke out, covering the great panic of August, 1914.

Among those who participated in that war was an American who was enlisted under the name of Douglas Sawyer. He joined the American legion and was with the French army when it was driven back on Paris just before the battle of the Marne. He seemed bent on getting himself killed, but despite his exposing himself in every possible way, death refused to strike him. Instead of getting killed he got promoted, and in a few months after his enlistment had reached the rank of major.

Then suddenly, to the surprise of every one, he tendered his resignation. This is not expected of an officer when there is work still to be done, but since Major Sawyer had distinguished himself for bravery and was an American, his resignation was accepted, and he left France for America. On arriving he went to a police station and gave himself up as George Benard.

The affairs of Edward Dewey were being wound up by a receiver. A fortnight before, Clarence Hobson had committed suicide, and the receiver had announced as the probable cause that he had, before Mr. Dewey's murder, been speculating in stocks, had been caught in the war panic, and it was his deficiency that had caused the suspension of the Edward Dewey concern.

George Benard made the following explanation as to his flight: Desiring to see Mr. Dewey upon a private matter at once and being told that he had gone to his office, Benard followed him there. He found Dewey dead. He remembered having seen and heard seen by the janitor entering the building. It was known that he was the heir of the murdered man. The two facts constituted a clear case of murder against him. Rather than face a trial that would surely turn against him, he would take the oblique of flight and find death on the battlefield of Europe.

Before leaving, he told what had occurred to his fiancée, Alice Dewey, who had kept him advised of what was transpiring at home. When the denouement came she informed him by cable, recommending him to return at once. He was never tried, and when the affairs of Edward Dewey were wound up there was a considerable surplus, which he and his wife inherited jointly.

Benard's friends differ in their opinion as to his course in running away at the time of the murder. The truth is, he was advised to do so by his fiancée, who not only realized his sensitive nature, but believed that during his absence it was possible, if not probable, that the real murderer would be found.

Mr. and Mrs. James Land, Mr. Coy Price and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Dock Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Davis were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Simpson Sunday.

For the Family Medicine Chest

Green Bay, Wis., Mrs. Wm. F. Scholz says: "I always use Foley's Honey and Tar for our children as it quickly breaks up their colds with no bad after effects, and they like to take it."

In this season of coughs, colds and croup, every family medicine chest should be supplied with a good cough medicine that can be relied upon when needed. Such a family cough syrup is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. This standard medicine has been on the market for years and in many sections was found in every home in the days when doctors were not so handy and when money was scarcer. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is an excellent medicine for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. It is an absolutely safe remedy, containing only honey, ingredients, and free from any harmful drugs.

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side. The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair."

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women. In its 30 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

Real Chinese Dragon.

That dragon monster of which the Chinese are so fond did actually exist, according to a Shanghai correspondent of the London Times. It is known that reptiles existed, very similar to the favorite pictured dragons, and there is reason to believe that some measured as long as 60 feet.

COLD WAVE ARRIVES.

The cold wave swept down on us suddenly Tuesday night just as some of us were trying to convince ourselves that it would not arrive. Some people who like to talk about the weather, claim that the thermometer went down as low as twelve early Wednesday morning, while most of them report about 16 to 18 degrees above zero. There were some snow flurries Tuesday night and last night was still cold with some prospect of rising temperature today.

QUALITY VERSUS QUANTITY.

Many housewives make a vital mistake in choosing some of their food-stuffs on the basis of quantity. It has been proven time and again that the cheapest is always the most expensive, while the highest price is not always the best.

There's a happy medium in everything. When you select foods, be careful. Don't choose any particular brand of, say Baking Powder for example, just because you get a big can for a small price.

The risk you take in ruining your entire baking and losing the cost of the materials involved is not anywhere equal to the small amount saved on the price of the Baking Powder.

Then again, because the price is high, don't think the quality is the best. Some women do, and they are losing money.

Look for the happy medium. You'll find it. Choose a brand that costs a moderate price and you'll find it more economical to buy and more economical to use.

The best Baking Powder in the world can be made so as to sell for 25c per 1 pound.

The Womans Club

(Edited By The Womans Club)

The Woman's Club meets promptly at 2:30.

Miss Fannie Rawson of Frankfort Public Library, will lecture at Womans Club room November 24th. All club members should look forward to meeting this charming woman and hearing a delightful speaker.

All womanhood will be interested in Miss Jeannette Rankin who ran on the Republican ticket in Montana, and was elected to be the first woman ever to sit in Congress. Since her election telegrams of congratulations have been sent to her from women in this and every other section of the country until, according to reports from her home town, Missoula, she has been deluged with them. Miss Rankin announces in reply that she will represent all of the women of the country and not only those of her own State.

She is about 34 years old and is about five feet four inches in height, slender, with light brown hair, her friends insist—has an unusual store of energy. She is the daughter of one of the best-known of the Montana pioneers, who went West when the State was so sparsely settled that it resembled a wilderness, and she and her three sisters have learned to "rough it" in the big Western State. She was graduated at the University of Montana, became an ardent suffragist while a girl and went to Seattle to study voice culture, and then went to New York City to take a course at the School of Philanthropy in that city.

Miss Rankin is a very feminine woman. It is said she dances well and makes her own hats, and sews, and has won genuine fame among her friends with the wonderful lemon meringue pie that she makes when she hasn't enough other things to do to keep her busy.

She is the sort of girl who won't stop until she has the results she is after, and it will be lots of fun to see her in her first fight in Congress. She is this sort; her father was trying to rent one of his houses in Missoula Mont, and there wasn't any sidewalk in front of it. A prospective tenant was found, but the tenant said he wouldn't take the house unless it had a sidewalk. Jeannette called up some carpenters and found them too busy to lay the sidewalk. And so she bought the lumber, borrowed a hammer and saw, and laid the sidewalk herself.

Among the things which Miss Rankin has announced that she will fight for in Congress is extension of the child labor laws—she intends to represent children as well as women in Congress—national woman suffrage, mothers' pensions, universal compulsory education, and similar propositions. It is expected that she will introduce a new national suffrage bill as soon as she has the opportunity.

Miss Rankin was among the early and most ardent workers for suffrage in the West before any States had granted women the vote.

MONTANA WOMAN

SENT TO CONGRESS.

Messages of congratulation from suffrage leaders in many parts of the country poured into Missouri for Miss Jeannette Rankin, Republican, the first woman to be elected to Congress. Miss Rankin's campaign managers contend that she had been successful by at least 2,000 majority.

"I felt that the women would stand by me," Miss Rankin said today. "It is wonderful to me to think of having the opportunity of being the first woman to sit in Congress with 434 men."

Miss Rankin is small and slight. She is a graduate of the University of Montana and the School of Philanthropy of New York City.

A BIT OF PHILOSOPHY.

From Good-By Er Howdy-Do.

By James Whitcomb Riley.
Say good by er howdy-do—
What's the odds betwixt the two?
Comin'—goin', ev'ry day—
Best friends first to go away—
Grasp of hands you'd rather hold
Than their weight in solid gold
Slips their grip while greetin' you.
Say good-by er howdy-do!
Howdy-do, and then, good-by—
Mixes jes' like laugh and cry;
Deaths and births, and worst and best,
Tangled their contrariest;
Ev'ry jinglin' weddin'-bell
Skeerin' up some funer' knell.
Here's my song, and there's your sigh,
Howdy-do, and then, good-by!
Some On's runnin' this concern
That's got nothin' else to learn;
Er He's willin', we'll pull through—
Say good-by er howdy-do!

HERE'S SMILE OF PERFECT HEALTH

This Man Was Rheumatic Cripple Five Years.

FINDS STRENGTH NEW WAY

John Lands, Victim of Chronic Stomach Weakness, and Generally Run Down Constitution, Tells How He Won New Vigor—Now Hale and Hearty, Enjoys Life to Limit.

Can YOU smile like this? Hearty, jolly, contented—it's the smile of perfect health. It comes from bounding red blood. Joy in living, the vim and vigor of sound manhood.

How long since YOU have smiled like this. Be honest with yourself. Do you face the mirror in the morning with cheery pleasure over another day born, or do you get up tired, drooping and weary, with a bad taste in your mouth, aches in your body and bones, and a grouchy feeling against all the world in your heart? If the latter, then you need just what John Lands needed—and found.

John Lands is the smiling man in the picture. He is a machinist and lives at 712 Freeman avenue, Cincinnati. It is the experience he has been through that makes him smile today.

Hobbled on Crutches. For five years John Lands has suffered from a weak stomach and kidney trouble. Rheumatism set in and at times made him virtually a cripple. He had to hobble around on crutches for weeks at a time, laying off from his work, losing time and money, suffering agony.

"I have taken fully a hundred different kinds of medicine to relieve my condition during the last five years," he said. "But nothing seemed to do me any real good. Food would lie heavy on my stomach and I had to take cathartics constantly. Then I had an extremely bad case of rheumatism. Once I had to lay off work for four months. I had to use crutches a good many weeks at a time."

"Look at me now! I am hale and hearty an enjoy life to the limit. I am in full possession again of all my natural vigor."

Tanlac Did It. "What did it? Tanlac, the wonderful new tonic and system purifier. It is one hundred per cent efficient. No medicine I ever took has done for me one-tenth of what Tanlac has done. Ask any of my friends who have seen me daily. They will tell you the same thing. This Tanlac is positively marvelous."

Tanlac is being introduced in Lancaster at R. E. McRoberts.

Tanlac may be obtained in the nearby cities. Paint Lick, J. N. Metcalf; Bryantsville, Becker & Ballard; Little Hickman, Collier and Bruner; Berea, S. E. Welch; Stanford, Penny's Drug Store; Junction City, Reynolds and Evans; Richmond, H. L. Perry & Son; Crab Orchard, Lyne Bros.; Burgin, G. T. Schofield; Danville, John S. Wells, Lancaster, R. E. McRoberts, and W. C. West, Silver Creek.

Optimistic Thought. He knows much who knows how to hold his tongue.

Monopoly. "That man prides himself on being a conversationalist." "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "He's never so happy as when he makes a string of people miss their trains while he monopolizes the bureau of information."

Won't YOU read the label on this paper and if in arrears, kindly send us check. A Surprise

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

I was steaming down New York bay in an ocean liner on my way to England. Standing on the deck near me a man was peering seaward, evidently moved by some strong emotion. I watched him for a few minutes, when, seeing that he was so intent upon something that he was passing through his mind that he was not conscious of standing within a rail so low that a pitch of the vessel might take him overboard, I took him by the arm. He turned his gaze upon me as a somnambulist awakened.

"Pardon me," I said; "the ship is beginning to get the rollers. You might lose your balance."

"Thank you very much," he replied. "I am much given to losing myself when intent upon something, and this scene has brought back the principal event of my life."

"It is a story?" I asked.

"It is."

We were both silent for a few minutes, when the gentleman, with rare confidence in me, a perfect stranger, told the following story:

"Thirty years ago today I was steaming down this bay, standing, as now, on the forward deck. But that is the end of my story instead of the beginning."

"When I was twenty-five years of age I met and fell in love with the daughter of a physician. She returned my love, but her parents objected to our marriage. They said that Edith was too young. She was plenty old enough to be married, being nineteen. The real reason was that they thought she could do better than to marry me. I did not doubt that she could, but I was as wrapped up in her as she was in me, and I did not care to give her up to that some better person than myself."

"I was employed in a lace importing house. They decided to establish a buyer in Brussels, and they offered me the position with a large increase of salary. I accepted it gladly, for at that time Edith and I were engaged, and the advanced salary would enable me to support a wife. When I told her of what I regarded as my good fortune she looked troubled. She was aware that her parents objected to me as a husband for her, and she surmised that my going to live abroad would excite so strenuous an opposition on their part as to bring about a parting between her and me."

"She was right. Her mother struggled with me to induce her to break with me. Edith stood out till she began to suspect that if she persisted longer she might be deprived of her liberty, then gave in. I received a note from her saying that she could not bring herself to leave her dear father and mother to live in a strange land. She was their only child. They had brought her up with great care, and now that she was arrived at an age where she could live of the most comfort to them it would be ungrateful to them to marry a man whose only way of supporting her would be to place an ocean between her and them."

"She asked me to come before leaving and bid her farewell, after which she said she hoped that I would be able to forget her. This naturally filled me with despair. I declined to see her again, feeling that it would not be best either for her or for me. Had she made our union dependent upon my remaining in America I would have renounced my situation abroad and waited for preference at home. But she did not place me in such position. Instead of going to see her, I wrote her a few lines, giving her up and bidding her for her own good to think no more of me and marry to her own advantage."

"That night before sailing I walked the floor, never once thinking of undressing. It seemed that the morrow would be the funeral of all I had hoped for since meeting Edith. At 1 o'clock in the morning I threw myself on a bed and slept a troubled sleep till 7. Then I arose and finished the last arrangements for my journey. It seemed like preparing for death."

"I went aboard at noon, the hour for sailing being 2 o'clock. The crowd of people hurrying to and fro maddened me, and to escape them I went to my stateroom, sat down on the seat under the portholes and gave myself up to despair. I heard the call, 'All ashore that's going!' and it sounded like clods on the coffin of the universe. Then the tugs puffed alongside, carrying the huge bulk out into midstream. When I had listened for some time to the monotonous throbbing of the engine I pulled myself together, went on deck and stood at where you saw me a few moments ago, a prey to the most despondent emotions. Suddenly I felt a touch on my shoulder and, turning—"

The speaker turned and faced a mid-dle-aged, but attractive woman, whose face wore a smile which was in her eyes as well as on her lips.

"Is the poor ancient mariner telling his story to whomsoever he may like to listen to him?"

The narrator introduced me to his wife and concluded his story:

"I felt that some touch and looked into the face of this same woman, then a girl not quite twenty."

"At the last moment she had suggested that her parents spend some time abroad, and the prospect of being near her induced them to relent as to her marriage with me. Six hours was all the time they had for preparation."

"The narrator introduced me to his wife and concluded his story: 'I felt that some touch and looked into the face of this same woman, then a girl not quite twenty.'

Grinder

INTERNATIONAL FEED GRINDERS

A strong steel stand prevents wobbling.
Two lag screws hold the machine firmly in position.
The grinding plates are self-aligning and therefore grind evenly.
A spring tension on the grinding plates insures even grinding.
A plate shifter lever at the end of the shaft is a safeguard against breakage and makes it a simple matter to clean the plates.

An International feed grinder and an IHC oil engine make an ideal combination. The engine will furnish convenient power for operating the feed grinder, and is especially adaptable for this purpose on account of the variation of the power required in proportion to the kind of grain being ground.

International feed grinders are made in the following types and sizes to meet all requirements:

Type B: 6, 8, and 10-inch—grinds corn on the cob
Type C: 6 and 8-inch—grinds small grains and shelled corn Type D: 8 and 10-inch—grinds corn in the husk, alfalfa and Kaffir corn in the head

There are other features which you can see for yourself if you will drop in for a demonstration the next time you are in town.

NAIL IN THE HOOF.

When a Horse Limp Cause of Lameness Should Be Investigated.

It is better to be safe than sorry.
When a horse steps on a nail take no chances. Remove the nail as soon as possible and thoroughly cleanse the wound. When a horse limps investigate the cause. This is the advice of David Gray, assistant in animal husbandry in the Kansas State Agricultural college.

The removal of the nail can easily be accomplished with an ordinary claw hammer, a small block of wood being used as a fulcrum over which to pry.

If the nail is not too large a pair of pliers is suitable for this work.

If not cured for immediately the wound may cause lockjaw or permanent lameness. For cleansing the wound a syringe and warm water may be used if care is taken to cleanse thoroughly. The best method is to apply liberally any coal tar product, such as creolin, as it is effective in breaking up the infection. If a nail wound is given immediate and careful attention
the life of a horse is usually safe.

Brood sows as often suffer from over-feeding as from underfeeding. An abundance of fat is the worst enemy of the litter. Sows that are too fat plus should be taken away from the rest of the hogs and be fed a different ration. Three excellent rations: (1) One part high grade tankage, twelve parts corn; (2) skim milk or buttermilk and corn, using three parts of milk to one part of corn; (3) wheat and shorts.
Which ever one of these rations is used a rack containing alfalfa should be so placed that the sows have free access to the hay at all times. In addition, the sows should be supplied with minerals. It is a good plan to dump the wood and coal ashes in the lot where the sows run. A mixture composed of a basket of charcoal or fine coal, five pounds of salt, five pounds of air slaked lime and two pounds of sulphur will give good returns if kept easily available.—Iowa Homestead.

CENTRE'S TEST.

Time and time again foot-ball dope has been overturned this year and in many previous years. According to the dope Centre should beat Transylvania 10 points. Marshal beat Wesleyan 101 to 0, Centre beat Wesleyan 111 to 0, and Marshal and Wesleyan played ten minutes longer than did Centre and Wesleyan. Transylvania and Marshal tied 19 to 19. Therefore Centre has a lead of ten points. Centre supporters do not count on this dope for anything. Centre backers claim that their team will be at its best Nov.
17th. Every team has its big game and all developments point to the fact that Centre will have her best organization in the field. Littick says this will be the hardest fought game in the state this season.

NEWMAN.

The above likeness is that of Newman the big 180 pound left end on Centre's football team. He is a terror at up a little he romps. Bennie is playing his second year, his weight puts him in good stead and Littick will have him in good trim for the Transylvania game.

DIDDLE.

The above is a likeness of rt. half Diddle who has played a star game for Centre this year. Biggers of Louisville who writes for Spalding's guide, has given Diddle a good deal of notoriety over his performance in the Centre and University of Louisville game. He is going good for an all Kentucky position. The best test of his ability as a ground gainer will come in the Transylvania game Nov. 17th which is to be played at Danville. Diddle is fast and never knows when to quit fighting.

Sluggish Liver.

ing and walk at least a mile every morning and walk briskly, not saunter.

Protracted services will begin at the Methodist church Monday evening, the 27th. The pastor R. M. Lee will be assisted by Rev. M. S. Clark of Harrodsburg.

Quite a neat little sum was realized at the pie supper Friday evening. The promoters being the members of Mrs Eliza H. Ballard's Sunday School class. The funds being added to the S. S. Treasury.

Quite a number from here went to Lexington Saturday for the "Wilson Parade" and celebration. Now that the Election is over and most of us rejoiced that Woodrow Wilson will again be our President, everyone has settled down to the regular routine of business, assured of four more years of Peace and Prosperity.

Rev. J. M. Baker of Salvisa gave a very interesting lecture on "Temperance" at the Methodist church Sunday morning. The services were under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. in observance of the World's Temperance Sunday. Quite a large crowd was present to hear Mr Baker, and all enjoyed him very much. Special music was also a feature of the service. Mrs J. C. Williams and Mrs J. Hogan Ballard singing a duet "Twas Rum That Spoiled My Boy."

Mr J. Harvey Dean was given a beautiful surprise dinner on Tuesday Nov. 13th, at his home near here. It was in celebration of his seventy eighth birthday and was arranged by his two daughters, Mrs Carter Sellers and Mrs Chas Dean. Only his nearest relatives were there and it was a most enjoyable occasion. The color scheme was pink and white. The table was lovely in its appointments with a center piece of pink and white caryanthemums and two large cakes with seventy eight candles and bowls of pink and white mints. As the guests entered the dining room the candles were lighted making a very effective and beautiful scene. The menu consisted of turkey, ham, oysters, salads and all the delicacies of the season, nicely served by the two gracious hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Norman Grow and Mrs Hogan Ballard. Needed Law.
That dear young mother down the street a piece came to us almost in tears yesterday and asked us if we wouldn't use our influence for the immediate enactment of a law limiting grandmothers to an eight-hour day, explaining that then by working all night with the baby she might undo the spoiling done in the course of the time when she had no control over her child.—Columbus (O.) Value of Work.
Idleness standing in the midst of unattended tasks is always tending to humility. Work touches the keys of endless activity, opens the infinite, and stands astruck before the immensity of what there is to do. I am sure we all know the fine, calm, sober humbleness of men who have tried themselves against the tasks of life. It was great in Paul, and in Luther, and in Cromwell. It is something that never comes into the character, never shows in the face, of a man who has not worked.—Phillips Brooks.

DAIRY and CREAMERY

CARE OF FALL CALVES.

Youngsters Must Be Fed Liberally to Prevent Stunted Growth.

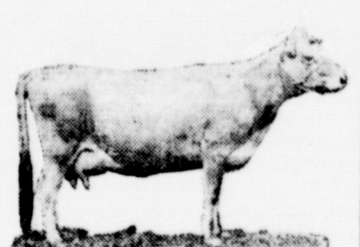

The average stockman is in a better position to give calves the right kind of care in the spring than in the fall, and yet in spite of this thousands of calves are dropped in the fall, the majority of which take pot luck during the winter, writes a correspondent of the Iowa Homestead.

Properly feeding the fall calf in winter is often a difficult proposition. We have found oats to be an excellent feed for the fall calves if fed in connection with skim milk and a little oil meal. It seems that the oats hasten growth from the first and cold weather doesn't stunt them, as is sometimes the case of the fall calf during its first winter. I sometimes crush the oats, but don't know that it is any advantage over the shelled oats.

The calf can very easily be taught to eat small grains. We teach them to eat a small amount of grain as soon as they are shifted off to skim milk. Always feed the grain dry.

The calf that comes in the fall must have closer attention than the ones that arrive in the spring. It will not make a profitable growth during the winter unless it is fed grain in connection with the skim milk. After the calf is a few weeks old it will begin to nibble at hay if it is put within its reach. Clover or alfalfa hay is good.

It is very expensive to rear the calves on whole milk and is not at all essential, for they can be successfully raised

It is alleged that there are more owners of Jersey cows in the United States than in all other countries combined. Here attract appearance and efficiency as a milk and butter producer are the reasons for the widespread popularity of the Jersey cow. The cow pictured is a Jersey and has a record of 25 pounds of butter in one month.

on skim milk if grain is given them. The skim milk must be given warm and the milk pan kept clean. A little ensilage can be fed in winter, but care must be used in feeding this at first, as it might cause a digestive disturbance.

It must be remembered that when butter fat is removed from milk the resulting product is richer in flesh building material than the whole milk. This being the case, the skim milk is balanced if the calf is fed liberally on corn.

Time and again it has been demonstrated by our experiment stations that cornmeal constitutes a most satisfactory kind of grain for calves when skim milk is used liberally. Ground oats, or even whole oats, may be also used to advantage. This grain is richer in mineral materials, and there is, therefore, some advantage derived from compounding a ration composed partially of oats. If handled rightly, a calf will start to eat when it is five to six weeks old, and after that it will use grain in considerable quantities. Care should be taken to keep its manger clean and sweet, and this means that no more grain should be fed than will be consumed there and then. The calf is dainty in its tastes, and unless a little care is exercised in this matter it is apt to be stunted in its growth, and every stockman knows that there is not much profit in handling a stunted farm animal of any kind.

FARM BUTTER.

Could Easily Be Made of Higher Quality Than the Creamery Product.

There is no reason in the world why the farmer cannot make butter of higher quality than that made at the creamery, according to N. E. Olson, instructor in dairy husbandry in the Kansas State Agricultural college.

The farmer can keep his cream in excellent condition, while the creameryman has little control over the cream he buys; hence the farmer's butter should top the market.

The first step in the making of good butter is the production of clean milk. If milk contains no putrefactive or gas forming bacteria butter can be produced which will be free from odors and which will not rotify if proper precautions are taken with the cream and with the butter after it is churned and packed.

Turnips as a Cow Feed.

Turnips have a distinct tendency to ward tainting milk when fed to cows. This is unfortunate, for turnips are easily grown, yield largely, are palatable, and cattle do well feeding upon them. They are excellent for feeding dry stock and young stuff, but they should be used sparingly for feeding cows giving milk. They may be fed in limited amounts by feeding them immediately after milking and having the air in the milking barn free from all odors originating from the turnips at milking periods.

POULTRY and EGGS

A WORD FOR BRAHMAS.

Profitable Farm Bird Both For Eggs and Market Purposes.

For the average farmer there is more money in roasters than in broilers because once past the broiler stage the mortality is exceedingly small, writes H. C. Wood, secretary Light Brahma club. Consequently the cost of production and raising to the roaster stage as compared with the increased price the roasters bring should normally show a greater profit than there is in marketing broilers when we take into consideration the mortality and large amount of care and attention required for the baby chicks and then on to broiler stage. I believe this applies particularly to the farmers raising poultry as a side line, who as a class are our biggest producers.

As an all round heavyweight fowl for the production of broilers, heavy roasters and capons the Brahma is in the front rank. The Light Brahma has been the most popular, but the dark Brahma is just as good. Both produce a great amount of breast meat, having long breasts and good width between the thighs. The cock shown is a dark Brahma.

Where large size as roasters is the object Light Brahmas lead all breeds, the standard weights being: Cocks, twelve pounds; hens, nine and a half pounds; cockerels, ten pounds, and pullets, eight pounds. From birth Light Brahmas are a desirable fowl for the breeder because of their unusual strength as compared with many other breeds, their ability to pick up a living on range and the ease with which they are handled, this latter due to their docility. They are heavy boned and feather quickly, so that their sturdiness favors their not huddling or crowding and smothering to death when raised in brooders or after their foster mothers have left them or been taken away.

The farm, with its unlimited range for the growing birds, offers ideal conditions for maturing Light Brahmas. On free range they are not inclined to take on flesh rapidly, but they develop wonderful bone, frame and stamina, just the things that are most essential for the fowl that is intended as a breeder or early winter roaster for market.

If a bunch of birds are to be fattened for market they can be yarded and housed at some convenient place where it is easiest for the feeding and watering. When it comes to yarding them a three foot fence is plenty high. The scraps from the table mixed with corn meal and sour milk will put on fat at a surprising rate and give these favored fowls a flavor that is not to be beaten. No need to go to the trouble of castrating Light Brahma cockerels, for they will reach ten pounds normally at eight months and can be pushed to twelve and fourteen pounds under favorable conditions.

Eggs are a problem on every farm, and here the Light Brahma shines during those winter months when every other breed almost requires specially constructed quarters if eggs are to be forthcoming. This breed does not require pampering and apparently the less of it they have the more eggs they lay. Their small pea combs are impervious to the coldest weather, and their mammoth frames, well covered and cushioned with an abundance of feathers, are ideally built for withstanding cold weather.

Examine the Roosts.

Many a poultryman says, "There isn't a chicken house on my place," when he has never really looked at his birds carefully enough to know. If your eyes are poor put on some glasses that magnify and look again. Then get busy. Some poultrymen should be compelled to spend a few nights in a "buggy" bed.—Farm and Fireside.

The Hen's Bath.

The dust bath should be roomy and constantly renewed, since it may get full of lice or vermin. Any good sized box may serve. It should be low enough for the fowls easily to get into and roomy enough for them to flutter and dust themselves freely.

THE GOLD AT GRAFTON

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate

He was a tall, dark faced man about forty years old who descended from the stage at Grafton one summer afternoon. He was a very quiet spoken man and registered his name at the tavern as Robert Meadows. He said he was interested in ornithology and might pick up a few birds as specimens for the taxidermist.

After three or four days he began to wander along the highway and across the fields. He had brought with him a fowling piece, and with this he took a few snapshots at robins and bluebirds, and he skinned them himself and cured the skins.

About half a mile from Grafton was a farm belonging to a man named Sweet. His land ran back from the highway to a small creek, and a part of this land was a sand strewn ridge. It ended in a bluff about fifteen feet high at the creek. The stranger was seen walking along this ridge several times, and he spent quite a little of his time along the creek. The reports of his gun were often heard, but he brought in very little game. From this it was concluded that he was a poor shot.

A man with a vise and a file can take a piece of brass and file it to dust in a few hours, and that dust will so closely resemble gold dust that an ordinary person will be deceived. If a spoonful of that dust is poured into a gun it can be easily shot into soft sandstone. That is one way of "salting" a mine. Often real gold dust is used. The ornithologist was shooting brass.

That ridge of sandstone had been there for centuries, and no one could remember back when that old pasture had been made any use of except to provide scanty grass for a flock of sheep. The present owner was dimly founded when the stranger asked him his price for the land. When the bargain was concluded he was very much elated. He had received $100 in cash for his almost worthless ridge. Mr Meadows was probably asked a hundred times in the next week of what use he could possibly make of the land, but his replies were not satisfactory to any one. It was two weeks after the sale and the recording of the deed when he came in from his daily walk one day with a chunk of the sandstone wrapped in paper in his hand. That sandstone was a shine with specks of gold, and when the stone was crumbled in the fingers there was gold in the middle of it. When it was pounded up in dust with a mallet the most doubtful man in Grafton lost his last doubts.

There was no call for any one to ask Mr Meadows where he picked up that stone. Every one knew that it must have come from the ridge.

Next morning there were not only twenty but 200 citizens who went out to the gold fields. They walked along the sand strewn ridge from the highway to the creek, and they waded up and down the creek. Yes, the gold was there. It was in sight for many feet up and down the creek.

On getting back to the tavern Mr Meadows would have gone to his room to write some important letters, but a crowd detained him. There were quite a number of wealthy men in Grafton, and they saw a chance to add to their wealth. They wanted to know if Mr Meadows would form a stock company and let them subscribe at least half the capital. If he wouldn't do that, would he sell claims along the ridge and the creek? His reply was that he would think it over.

When the stranger had wrestled with his thoughts he called in the most prominent citizens and said:

"Gentlemen, I have gone over this thing a hundred times. Some of you want a stock company, and some of you want to buy claims. I have concluded to sell claims, and the owners can do what they like with the ore taken out. I don't know how the gold runs. I have seen only just what you have seen. You will have to go it blind, and so will I. I make no guarantees."

It was understood that every sale should be for cash down, and the deeds were to be delivered on the spot.

The reader should be prepared to hear that when the morrow and the auction came there were at least 500 people on the spot.

The first choice of claims sold for $2,000. The second claim was the one next to it, and it sold for almost as much as the first. The last two claims were located in the bed of the creek, although no gold showed there.

Of course the whole thing was a rank fraud. Every claim buyer was up at an early hour next morning, and if he did not wield a pick or a crowbar himself he had hired one or two men to work for him. In the midst of the turmoil the stranger settled his bill at the hotel and disappeared, taking with him many thousands of dollars.

Meadows was never heard of any more. Two or three days after he had disappeared some of the "ores" was assayed by one competent to do it, and he was not long in declaring that the gold was pretty good brass.

Most of the ridge is there yet, and the sheep wander around as of yore. There were no suicides and no arrests. Grafton simply swallowed the fraud and kept as quiet as possible over it, but the next stranger that comes along with a discovery to sell will have to have wings to fly out of that town ahead of a mob.

The Greatest of All Tonics and System Builders.

No one knows the value of HEALTH better than the one who is losing it through disease. The maker of a thing knows best what that thing needs in the way of repairs. So, as God made the human body he knows best what we need for repairs when attacked by disease. That is why you find in your Bible, references to the "Roots and Herbs of the field that shall heal the nations." Before the days of Infirmarys, Hospitals, Insane Asylums, Prisons, people were well, healthy, long lived and happy. There was no "appendicitis" no "leaking hearts" no "ovarian troubles" no "floating kidneys" no "heart failure" no "operations" or cutting, whittling and slicing away the precious organs of the body that God gave human beings to KEEP. Why? Because people used God's medicines, Root and Herbs and kept well. You are the same human being to-day as were those of the past, what kept them well and cured their diseases will do the same for you. God's word and nature's laws are immutable, unchanging, honest and true. This Great

KENTUCKY NEWS CUT TO THE QUICK FOR BUSY READERS

Jas. J. Smith, 63, for sixteen years Sergeant-At-Large of the Court of Appeals, died at his home in Frankfort of heart disease.

The 1916 Kentucky State Fair netted a profit of $10,864, according to the financial statement submitted by Secretary W. J. Gooch to the State Board of Agriculture.

For the first time in many months no suicide was recorded in Louisville during October. There were 255 deaths and 365 births in the city. Eleven persons died a violent death, four of whom were slain.

The Southwestern Kentucky Dental Association held its semi-annual meeting at Paducah and decided to establish a system of training in the public schools of that section in the care of the teeth.

"Uncle David" Galloway died at his home at Uno, near Mumfordsville. He had reached the advanced age of 98. He leaves four sons and three daughters, thirty grandchildren and thirty-three great grandchildren.

The Louisville and Nashville Railroad company filed suit in the United States District Court in Louisville questioning the constitutionality of the recently enacted "Adamson eight-hour law" for railroad employees.

Leon Nolen, 39, Deputy Sheriff of Perry County, was shot and almost instantly killed by a negro whom he sought to arrest. As Nolen fell he fired, fatally injuring one of the negroes. Nolen formerly lived in Breathitt County.

W. R. Cowan, who says he deserted from the navy at Norfolk, surrendered to authorities at Lexington. He said he wanted to go back to Norfolk and rejoin his company in the marine corps. Cowan is a resident of Crab Orchard, Lincoln county.

Twenty-four students of high schools in the state of California, in charge of Professor H. H. Crocker, head of the Department of Animal Husbandry of the University of California, visited Lexington and inspected the big stock farms around that city.

All immediate danger of a strike of trainmen and firemen of the L. & N. railroad was averted when Milton H. Smith, President of the road, agreed to submit the case to mediation. The agreement was brought by Judge W. L. Chambers, of the Federal Board of Mediation.

Immediate release of coal cars by "borrowing" lines and the return of the equipment to the railroads owning them was ordered by Commissioner Charles C. McChord at the injury being conducted in Louisville into the car shortage situation by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Let your porter out of jail; gone to Louisville," was scribbled on a piece of paper left by a burglar who entered a drug store in Lexington. The cash register was robbed and some of the goods taken. Henry Davis, former porter at the store, is in jail charged with robbing the store some time ago.

A forest fire, which burned for four days, destroyed between four and five square miles of timber in the Manginon neighborhood, in north Christian. Only desperate work kept a number of farmhouses from being consumed. Rain checked the fire and put it under control.

The Retail Grocers' Association in Louisville has entered the milk strike fight. The association has appointed a committee to determine if the action of the Kentucky Milk Producers Association has violated the "pooling law," through its concerted movement to cut off the supply of milk from distributors.

The engagement has been announced of Robert Worth Bingham of Louisville, once mayor of the city and later Chancellor of the Jefferson Circuit Court, to Mrs. Henry M. Plagier, widow of Henry M. Plagier, one of the founders of the Standard Oil company, who left an estate estimated at $60,000 to his widow.

Judgment for the sum of $44,835 against the B. & O. Railway Company was entered in the Jefferson Circuit Court. The amount represents omitted taxes for nine years past on rolling stock and franchise which the railroad claimed exempt. Its defense being that it was engaged in an interstate business.

Bond issues favorably voted included $20,000 improvement of the water supply for Versailles; $20,000 for a light plant at Murray; $10,000 for waterworks and light plant at Olive Hill, and for 10 separate improvements at Covington. An indication of progress was voiced in Ashland by the adoption of a $200,000 bond issue for school improvements.

The United States army recruiting station at Louisville has been asked to aid in the work of securing recruits for the Kentucky national guard which is short about 3,000 men. The request was received in a communication from the department of the east. Governor's Island, N. Y., by Major John Battle, who has charge of the station at Louisville.

John Bowles, 50, farmer of near Hopkinsville, killed his wife and son-in-law, James Aldridge, 39, and then committed suicide. Mrs. Bowles had filed suit for divorce, but recently withdrew it. Bowles fired five pistol shots into her body. Then he rode to Hopkinsville and slew Aldridge with a shotgun as he rose from bed. Bowles' body was found with a pistol butted in his head.

The State Board of Valuation assessed whisky at $12 the barrel, the same as last year. This yields an annual revenue to the state of approximately $160,000.

The Workmen's Compensation Board passed on 167 claims, including three permanent disability claims. The full amounts allowed by law were given to the estates of Gabe Johnson, killed in the Straight Creek company's mine; James Henry Muters, killed in the Winslow company mines, and Robert B. Smith, killed in the Bond Jellico company mine.

The Court of Appeals refused to disturb the $500 verdict obtained by Amos Leslie against Harry Walters, Chief of the Fire Department at Van Lear. It was held that the Consolidated Coal Company was in nowise liable for the "shower bath" given to Leslie by Walters in Van Lear in Sept. 1913. Leslie, while walking down the street, was sprinkled by Walters.

Police Judge Riley of Lexington does not believe that a woman and her husband should be separated. He evidenced this in police court, when Mrs. Fannie Kelly faced him on a charge of vagrancy. She said her only means of support was her husband, who was in the workhouse. "I don't believe a man and his wife should be separated," he said, "so you may join him there for thirty days."

Guaranteed milk for Lexington is a probability within reach of efforts now being put forward by the Department of Health, according to the belief of Dr. John D. Maguire, its head. The goal long coveted is to be achieved through a system conceived by him which will give the department actual control of the purity of the supply. A central inspection station, through which all milk sold must pass, is his solution.

Mrs. Rosa Hecht and her daughter, Miss Ida Hecht, were arrested in Louisville, charged with the murder of Herman Hecht, an expressman, who was shot to death recently. Stories told by members of the family were to the effect that Hecht was shot to death by a negro burglar. Police determined to arrest the women after the finding of a revolver, said to have been owned by Hecht, in an abandoned well on the premises of the Hecht home.

Special inquiry into the coal holdings on the Pere Marquette and Michigan Central was ordered in the car shortage inquiry being conducted in Louisville. A secret paper, purported to have been circulated among shippers by coal brokers, set out the fact that at junction points along these lines cars of coal were held up. Examiner Dow charged this was done to extort high prices and these railroads were ordered to report by telegraph.

Buford Hughes, 30, of near Richmond, who was supposed to have been buried there a few weeks ago, walked in to his home a few days ago, hearty and well. Hughes had left for Ohio several weeks ago. Shortly afterwards the body of a man was found on the railroad near his home. The resemblance caused the family to believe it their son. The question now is "who was the man they buried?" Hughes knew nothing of the affair until he returned home.

John E. Madden, noted turfman, and Louis des Cognets, leading business man and clubman, were in adjoining chairs in a Lexington barber shop last Thursday morning. They were discussing the election. "Why it's $20 to 25 cents that Hughes will get the decision," exclaimed Madden. "I'll take that bet," said des Cognets, extending a twenty-five-cent piece to Madden, who quickly accepted the wager. It was agreed that the two barbers who were shaving them should have an equal division of the $20.

Mrs. Susan Kennedy, 45 years old, was found dead in her bed with her skull crushed, at her home in Louisville. Neighbors responded to frantic calls of Robert Kennedy, 45, her husband. There is only one bed at the Kennedy home, and this had been occupied by Kennedy, his wife and their six-year-old son, John. Kennedy is in jail, charged with the murder. He claims he is innocent. Kennedy told the police he and his son both slept soundly and they heard no noises during the night. When Kennedy awoke he tried to arouse his wife and found her dead. The boy's story corroborates his father's.

The misuse of the word "and" in the instructions given by the Whitley Circuit Court in the trial of J. H. Taylor, convicted of the murder of Frank Sumner may save Taylor from serving a life sentence in the penitentiary. The fight, which resulted in Sumner's death, took place at a political meeting in Pulaski County in 1915. The Court instructed the jury that unless it believed the killing to be necessary and believed that Taylor thought that it was necessary to kill Sumner to save his life then he should be found guilty. The Court says that the word "and" should not have been used in this connection, and therefore ordered a new trial for Taylor.

It is estimated that thousands of Kentucky women, including many in Louisville and vicinity, "fell" for the endless chain scheme of the fake at Minneapolis, Minn., who offered to send a guaranteed $450 petticoat for a dime. The dead-letter office at Washington, D. C., has received over 100,000 letters containing a dime each that were forwarded from Minneapolis. Many of these were sent by Kentucky women, who no doubt are awaiting for their petticoats and wondering why they don't come. Instead of getting the petticoat, each woman will receive from Washington her dime inclosed in a coin envelope. It is estimated this petticoat fake will cost the Government $25,000, figuring cost of returning the dimes, clerical help, etc.
